

NEW ABSTRACT

A discharge lamp includes a burner having a discharge space, and electrodes extending in the discharge space which is filled with a gas. An outer bulb surrounding the burner and is coated with a light-absorbing coating. A first interference filter is located on the light-absorbing coating, and a second interference filter is located on or in at least a part of the burner.